Teaching Gen Z Students: Strategies For Dynamic & Engaging Learning Experiences
Thursday, August 22 ~ 1:00-2:00pm (Eastern) & Thursday, September 26 ~ 1:00-2:00pm (Eastern)

Once the live date has passed, this training will be available on demand.

Overview

This year, 2018, the first wave of Gen Z students will enter the college. Students born after the events of September 11, 2001 have lived in a world entirely different from the one we grew up in and, as a result, bring a unique set of preferences and perspective to their learning experience. While a complete picture of Generation Z is still emerging, some common characteristics are clear; Gen Z students are cynical, private, entrepreneurial and hyper-aware. Also, like Millennials that came before them, Gen Z is technology-reliant and exceptionally skilled at multitasking. Recognizing the skills, traits, and preferences of the Gen Z learner, reliance on traditional instructional strategies is simply ineffective. In this webinar, we will explore challenges associated with teaching Gen Z students and identify innovative (and effective) instructional approaches to create a stimulating, engaging learning environment. Further, we will examine how technology can be integrated into the classroom to create a collaborative, dynamic learning experience that meets the needs of Gen Z students.

Objectives:

- Examine strategies for creating interactive learning environments that meet the needs and preferences of Gen Z students
- Design learning activities that engage students as collaborators in the teaching-learning dynamic
- Integrate technology to engage and stimulate learning for Gen Z students

Who Should Attend?

- Faculty (campus-based, full-time and adjunct)
- Faculty Training and Development
- Any educator interested in learning more about teaching gen z

Speaker(s)

B. Jean Mandernach, Ph.D.

“While Gen Z shares the multitasking, technology-reliant characteristics of Millennials, the similarities between generations may end there. We can’t teach the way we have always taught and expect our students to adjust. Gen Z students process information quickly, focus in bursts, and seek just-in-time information to meet their needs. To engage Gen Z, we need to rethink what it means to “teach” in our classrooms.”

B. Jean Mandernach, Ph.D. is Research Professor and Executive Director of the Center for Innovation in Research and Teaching at Grand Canyon University. Her research focuses on enhancing student learning through assessment and innovative online instructional strategies. In addition, she has interests in examining the perception of online degrees, the quality of online course offerings and the development of effective faculty evaluation models. Jean received her B.S. in comprehensive psychology from the University of Nebraska at Kearney, an M.S. in experimental psychology from Western Illinois University and Ph.D. in social psychology from the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.
